Cisplatin and vinorelbine in the treatment of advanced non-small-cell lung cancer. A phase II study was carried out to assess the efficacy of cisplatin and vinorelbine in the treatment of advanced non-small-cell lung cancer (NSCLC). All patients had previously been treated with one or more chemotherapy regimens for advanced disease and had received no more than two prior regimens. Cisplatin 75 mg/m², vinorelbine 25 mg/m² and fluorouracil 600 mg/m² (two divided doses) were given as a 1-hour intravenous infusion on day 1 every 3 weeks. The cisplatin dose was then increased to 100 mg/m² in the absence of haematologic or other toxic effects. Thirty-eight patients were enrolled; 23 were evaluable for response and 29 for toxicity. No objective responses were seen. One patient had a partial response and 10 patients had stable disease. Grade 3-4 thrombocytopenia and neutropenia occurred in 15% and 17% of the patients, respectively. There was one death attributed to toxicity and two patients died of progressive disease. The median survival time was 4 months, and the median time to treatment failure was 2.9 months. Cisplatin and vinorelbine appears to be active against advanced NSCLC, but the acceptable level of toxicity in the present regimen may make this combination unsuitable for widespread use in lung cancer. I was extremely fortunate to see a classic World Championship game between two of the best players of their generation: two of my heroes, in fact, since I was a teenager 82157476af
